

Proof is in the pudding

Margaret Olley once joked that people liked to paint her portrait because she had “a face like a pudding and it’s easy to draw”. Her humorous response came after friend and biographer Christine France asked why Olley thought she was such a popular portrait subject for fellow artists.

Margaret Olley is the most painted face in Australian art history and many of the best examples are included in a new exhibition, Portraits: Margaret Olley, featured at the Tweed Regional Gallery & Margaret Olley Art Centre until 10 September.

As a fledgling artist aged 25, Olley sat for friend and fellow artist William Dobell, hurtling the shy young woman into a media frenzy when the portrait won the 1948 Archibald Prize. More than six decades later, Olley was again the subject of an Archibald Prize winning portrait; this time by Ben Quilty in 2011. Olley’s remarkable career is bookended by these iconic portraits.

The new exhibition includes a number of self-portraits, alongside works by 13 Australian artists considered to be among the most significant figures in Australian art: William Dobell, Russell Drysdale, Margaret Cilento, Ian Fairweather, Judy Cassab, Ray Croke, Jeffrey Smart, Robert Barnes, Nicholas Harding, Danelle Bergstrom, Adam Knott, Greg Weight and Ben Quilty.

The exhibition is complemented by supporting events:

Gallery Up Late, Friday 9 June – after-hours access to the Gallery and Café from 5pm. 6.15pm (for 6.30pm) to 7.30pm – Panel Discussion: Reflections of Olley. Art Gallery of South Australia Director Nick Mitzewich hosts a panel discussion about much-loved artist, mentor and muse Margaret Olley.

Changes to emergency services funding

Major changes are coming to the way emergency services are funded. From Saturday 1 July 2017, the NSW Government will abolish the Emergency Services Levy (ESL) on insurance policies and replace it with a Fire and Emergency Services Levy (FESL) to be paid by all property owners alongside Council rates.

The FESL paid will, in part, depend on your property’s classification as residential, farmland, industrial, commercial or public benefit, and whether or not the land is vacant.

A fairer levy for us all.

All Tweed property owners will receive a letter to advise of their classification and FESL information will also be distributed in land valuation letters.

Please note the FESL is a State Government charge, not a Council increase in rates. The State Government has directed councils across NSW to collect the levy which Council will forward on to the State Government.

The revenue raised from FESL will be directed by the State Government to the NSW State Emergency Service, NSW Rural Fire Service and NSW Fire and Rescue.

Further details about the FESL are available at fesl.nsw.gov.au or by phoning the FESL information line on 1300 787 872.

Great response flows in

A community values report providing valuable insight to the uses and environmental condition of the Tweed River Estuary, completed as part of preparing a new management plan for the waterway, has been received by Council and is now available for the public to view.

“Over 1200 people took part in our river values and uses survey conducted in September and October 2016,” Council’s Waterways Program Leader, Tom Alletson, said.

“This is a great rate of participation, reflecting the high level of interest in the river from across the community, throughout Tweed Shire and beyond.

“This study shows the Tweed River is important in the lives of an overwhelming majority of the community, especially those who have a direct connection with the River (97% online and 77% phone).

“Its scenic beauty is greatly admired but most respondents were unaware that the health of the River system was not good in many aspects. Our river needs far more careful management by governments and concerted efforts by the community if we want it to thrive once again,” he said.

Mr Alletson said the survey was conducted online and randomly by telephone, so the information collected was robust and comprehensive. It would be of great assistance in future decision making to balance river recreational use and conservation.

“In summary, it was found the river is highly regarded for its natural and scenic values and is generally considered to be healthy. Recreational opportunities are highly valued and there is general support for a wide range of passive and active, water and shore-based pursuits,” he said.

“People have told us that protection of the natural features of the waterway, addressing bank erosion and ensuring good water quality are priority issues for future river management.

“The community also wants Council and other government agencies to ensure recreational use of the waterway is able to be enjoyed without conflict.”

The community values report can be accessed in full at yoursaytweed.com.au/tweed-river-estuary/documents

A newly-formed Tweed Coast and Waterways Committee met last week and used the community values report to prepare a vision statement for the river, to appear at the start of the completed Tweed River Estuary Management Plan.

The Tweed River Estuary Management Plan will be completed in December 2017 and will be exhibited for public comment in early 2018.

Clearing the way for the future

Vegetation clearing on the railway corridor in Tweed Shire will begin this week, to assist ongoing planning for a proposed rail trail between Murwillumbah and Crabbes Creek.

Contractors will mow a path along the tracks so Council officers can safely access the full length of the corridor within Tweed Shire, while vegetation clearing around bridges will allow better assessment of their condition.

“As Council continues to pursue government funding for the project, this clearing will enable officers to progress the necessary designs and evaluation,” Council’s Director Engineering, David Oxenham, said.

Mayor Appeal Fund

 (As at 12 May)

One hundred percent of funds will be distributed; there are no administration fees associated with the appeal. All donations are tax deductible. To donate or apply for assistance, visit <http://www.tweed.nsw.gov.au/MayorAppealFund>

Revitalisation works continue

Sections of Kingscliff’s Marine Parade carpark will be closed during coming weeks, while the adjacent footpath is replaced as part of the Kingscliff Foreshore Revitalisation.

Work is scheduled to begin this week, with only a portion of the carpark closed at any time and full access to parking restored on weekends to minimise interruptions to car parking in the central business district of Marine Parade.

The replacement of the footpath is among the latest stages as the revitalisation progresses steadily, to construct a more permanent rock wall, establish Kingscliff Central Park and upgrade Kingscliff Beach Holiday Park.

It is anticipated the footpath construction will take approximately three weeks, construction fencing next to the carpark will then be shifted back, reinstating access along this path to the pedestrian crossing in front of the cenotaph.

Cute and cuddly or feral pest?

A community survey on rabbits on the Tweed Coast has revealed a range of sentiments among residents.

Many residents thought rabbits were cute and cuddly and enjoyed seeing them around but the community was also concerned about their wellbeing. People reported seeing rabbits being chased, attacked and killed by domestic dogs and cats. Others reported observing rabbits struggling to survive on remaining grass patches in native bushland and dunes and under buildings, with some relying on hand feeding and rescue.

Many survey respondents don't like the rabbits – considering them prolific breeders, pests causing widespread environmental damage and competing with native animals for food and shelter.

Many residents reported having buildings undermined, gardens and lawns destroyed and walkways damaged. Some feared predators such as dogs, foxes and snakes were attracted to the area by rabbits, prompting concerns about safety for families. Many recalled having to stay away from walkways and beaches after wild dogs attacked pet dogs and menaced walkers only a few years ago.

“Thank you to all Tweed residents who completed the rabbit survey, with one lucky Casuarina resident receiving a $50 voucher to the business of their choice for participating in the survey,” Council’s Acting Program Leader for Pest Management, Tanya Fountain, said.

Rabbits are not native to Australia, as some people believe, and at south Kingscliff and Casuarina they are the result of pet rabbits escaping, being ‘let go’ or dumped. They now have to fend for themselves and these cute and cuddly rabbits are not leading easy, free-ranging lives. Throughout most of Australia, wild rabbits are a declared pest.

One long-time local’s comment summed up many community members’ thoughts: “It is not that long ago that there were no rabbits in this area. People should be responsible for their pets. Irresponsible pet owners’ behaviour not only affects the rabbits themselves, in an inhumane way, but also affects neighbours and the rest of the community. It is the pet owners, not the rabbits that have caused the problem.”

FOX TRAPPING PROGRAM

Fox trapping program at Fingal Head – 22 May to 19 June 2017

Tweed Shire Council (Council) is working with the Tweed Byron Local Aboriginal Land Council (TBLALC) to undertake a fox trapping program on TBLALC land on the Fingal Peninsula.

Foxes have been frequently recorded on the Fingal Peninsula and they pose a serious threat to native fauna.

The fox trapping program is a joint conservation initiative which aims to remove foxes to benefit local threatened fauna like the Bush Stone-curlew, Beach Stone-curlew and Green and Loggerhead Turtles.

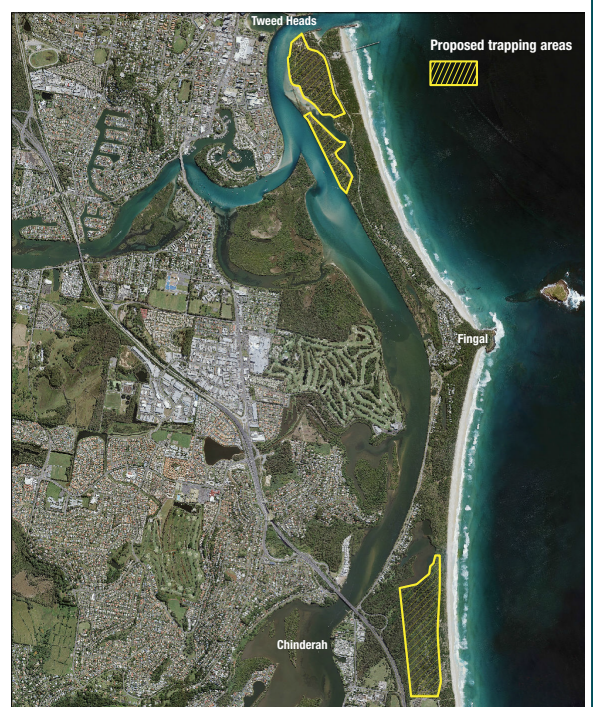

Fox trapping (using soft-jaw traps) will begin in the hatched areas of the map below on 22 May 2017 and will continue until 19 June 2017 or until the foxes have been removed.

It is your responsibility to ensure that you keep your domestic pets out of these areas. If any domestic pets are caught in traps they will be taken to Tweed Shire Council Pound.

Trapping is being undertaken on private land only with tracks leading into trapping areas signposted to alert members of the public to the trapping program.

If you would like any further information on the fox trapping program please contact Council’s Acting Pest Management Program Leader Tanya Fountain on (02) 6670 2587.

This Project has been assisted by the New South Wales Government through its Environmental Trust.
