New outdoor gym equipment for Tweed Heads park

New, age-friendly outdoor exercise equipment has been unveiled in John Follent Park in Tweed Heads, in further response to the area's ageing population and its recreation needs.

The exercise pods are a free and social exercise option available to everyone, serving a diverse range of users and contributing to the overall health of the community. Nestled in a cluster of trees, users can enjoy beautiful views of the Tweed River while exercising.

To launch the equipment, Council and North Coast Local Health District will offer two four-week 'Come and Try' programs for over 50s.

The first program will begin on 25 November and will be held each Saturday from 8.30 to 10am, to show residents how to effectively use the equipment. A second program will begin on Saturday 3 February.

The state-of-the-art exercise pods replaced outdated equipment in the park, following consultation with the community.

John Follent Park was chosen as the best site because of the high proportion of older residents in the surrounding area, its beautiful setting and the number of people who walk, cycle and run through the park.

Each program will be limited to 15 participants and bookings are required by phoning 0423 956 585.

Tweed Dragon Boat Club members Colleen Drysdale and Geoff Holdsworth try out the new exercise equipment at John Follent Park and plan to use it as part of their training preparation for upcoming regattas.

Mammoth effort now showing fruits of labour

Contractors are continuing to stabilise the riverbank along Tumbulgum Road, between Sunnyside Lane and Old Ferry Road, Murwillumbah, in preparation for constructing a new seven-metre wide road through the section.

Large concrete piers have been poured progressively down the bank to hold long soil nails in place. The bank has then been seeded with hydromulch, before a layer of mesh and then wire has been placed over the top.

Jute matting will be placed on the lower reaches of the embankment at the river's edge. The grass seed, which is a mix of natives, will grow through the jute matting, mesh and wire structures. The soil nails will be capped by discs, which will sit at the surface and remain visible in the grass. The riverbank stabilisation work is expected to be completed by the end of November.

Meanwhile, Council is completing work on upgrading the stormwater drainage from the site at both ends. They also are building a small retaining wall and stairway at the Sunnyside Lane end.

By Christmas, Council expects to have all work on the western side of the worksite complete for unimpeded pedestrian and cyclist access via the new shared-user path.

Roadworks will be started but are unlikely to be completed by Christmas. The road base has to be built up with the importation of materials, before kerb and gutter is laid and then the road built. Any wet weather will hamper progress and it is likely the new road will not be completed until early 2018.

The view from across the river shows the depth of the embankment and the scope of the riverside stabilisation works. Jute matting will be placed below the mesh and wire shown above.

Time to stock library shelves ahead of opening

Richmond Tweed Regional Library staff have begun the huge task of moving thousands books, periodicals, discs and other library resources into the expanded Tweed Heads Library, ahead of its opening to the public on Wednesday 6 December.

Last Saturday was the final day for a temporary Tweed library, which has been operating since the start of the year while the main library building has been extended and upgraded.

“While there will be just over three weeks from the closure of the

JM Kelly Builders Site Supervisor Peter Richardson and Richmond Tweed Regional Library Tweed Area Librarian Selina Ryan discuss the plans for the finishing touches to the upgraded Tweed Heads Library.

Cenotaph ready for service

A section of safety fencing at the Kingscliff Foreshore Revitalisation was moved east this week to allow public access to the cenotaph in time for last Saturday’s Remembrance Day ceremony.

The cenotaph (pictured) is a centrepiece of the new central park constructed as part of the $21.8 million foreshore revitalisation. The paved area around the cenotaph has been expanded to accommodate the large crowds that consistently gather for Anzac Day and Remembrance Day ceremonies.

Work has been completed on the initial stage of the revitalisation and construction is well underway on a modernisation and upgrade of Kingscliff Beach Holiday Park. Installation of amenities buildings in the holiday park has begun and construction of internal roads is progressing well.

temporary library to the reopening of the new building, to enable us to move all the resources, there will be a number of services to ensure continuity of service to our users,” RTRL Tweed Area Librarian Selina Ryan said.

Customers can continue to reserve books and other resources online, by visiting the RTRL website, and reservations fees will continue to be suspended until 6 December. The mobile library service will visit the Tweed Heads Civic and Cultural Centre on 13 and 27 November to further assist users with browsing collection items and collecting reserved items.

Returns to the Tweed Heads Library can continue to be placed in the external returns chute at the temporary library site.

Materials and public activities continue to be available at the Murwillumbah and Kingscliff libraries.

Baby Bounce and Storytime sessions, which had been relocated to Tweed Heads South during the library expansion, will be suspended from 13 November until the new library space reopens.

Library fit-out contractors last week started installing shelving and other furniture, ahead of the huge task of putting all the Library’s resources back on the shelves.

Users are reminded the Murwillumbah Library will be closed to the public from 9am to 2pm on Wednesday 15 November, while new loan stations and gates are installed for the Radio Frequency ID self-service system for borrowing. Kingscliff Library will be closed on Thursday 16 November, also from 9am to 2pm while the installation of the stations and gates is completed.

A fitting final curtain call for Tweed on Film

Treasured ‘footage from the vault’ and some premiering local gems will be screened in Murwillumbah next week, as a final event for Tweed Regional Museum’s Tweed on Film exhibition.

The Old and Gold film night at Tweed Regional Museum Murwillumbah on Thursday 16 November is being presented in partnership with ABC North Coast.

It will feature the ABC’s recording of Tumbulgum and the Countdown to Midnight at the First Supper Between Now and Forever, performed at Tumbulgum Hall in late 2016 as part of the ‘If These Hall Could Talk’ project.

The film night also includes a selection of ‘home grown’ content produced as part of the ABC’s Postcards from the Tweed workshop, held in conjunction with the Museum’s Tweed on Film exhibition.

The three short stories were made as part of the Postcards workshop: Suellen Baker’s Winnie – the story of a sheep that thinks she’s a dog, Megan Jack’s Healing One Step at a Time, and A Surprising Museum by Bridgette Watkins.

Old and Gold also features a number of past gems from the ABC and the National Film and Sound Archives:

- Youthful Stud Master, filmed in 1969, is the story of 14-year-old Alistair Ault’s early interest in his own stud herd on the family dairy property Malabar at Uki
- A 1969 ABC Four Corners program profiles Fingal
- The first dragon boat race at Tweed Heads in 1986

“Tweed on Film has been a fantastic celebration of film in its various forms,” Tweed Regional Museum Director Judy Kean said.

“The Old and Gold program is a great note to finish on. In many ways it’s a snapshot of the evolution from newsreel and TV documentary through to the present, where the ability to put together short films that capture our stories is really within everyone’s grasp, like the stories from our Postcards from the Tweed workshop, will be the future historical documents of our community.”

Old and Gold screens at Tweed Regional Museum Murwillumbah from 5.30pm. The Tweed on Film exhibition continues until Saturday 25 November.

Admission is free but bookings are essential and can be made by contacting the Museum at trm@tweed.nsw.gov.au or by phoning (02) 6670 2493.

Fingal volunteering champions

A local coastcare group that works closely with Council was a winner at the recent NSW Landcare Awards.

Fingal Head Coastcare claimed a Sure Gro Coastcare Award, for improvements to coastal and marine environments, when the presentation ceremony was held in Albury on 26 October.

Fingal Head Coastcare President Kay Bolton said it was welcome acknowledgement of the hard work by many members, in what is believed to be the oldest, continually operating dune care group in NSW.

They have spent the past 31 years regenerating native vegetation and helping to educate and involve the local community in protecting and increasing the resilience of coastal ecosystems. Their revegetation of crown land on the Fingal Peninsula includes littoral rainforests, coastal woodlands, wetlands, heathland, native grasslands, dunal and headland vegetation.

Fingal Head Coastcare currently has 166 members, with members working four days a week to maintain 33 hectares of regenerated native vegetation previously destroyed by sand mining during the 1950s and '60s.

Working under the guidance of Council's Natural Resource Management Unit and in liaison with Tweed Byron Local Aboriginal Land Council, the group recorded 2900 volunteer hours in 2016 as they planted more than 2000 trees.

The group's community education program and activities involve a large number and variety of community groups, including many programs for young people.

Its activities have earned a large number of regional and state awards.

Diluted sewage spills into Tweed waterways

Council was last week working to manage and contain a diluted sewage spill in the Terranora Inlet, following an incident at the Banora Point Wastewater Treatment Plant.

A large volume of raw wastewater bypassed from the inlet works of the plant to the final holding lagoon within the plant without treatment. In the final holding lagoon it was diluted with treated wastewater. A portion of this diluted wastewater was then discharged into the Terranora Inlet at the Navy Base on Dry Dock Road through the licenced discharge point for the plant.

The discharge began last Tuesday morning and was stopped by 5.30pm last Wednesday. All sewage and diluted wastewater has been held within the plant for re-treatment since that time.

The Environmental Protection Authority and other relevant authorities were notified immediately.

Council liaised with local oyster growers to ensure water quality testing measures are in place and monitored any effects on aquatic life.

Initial testing of water around the point of discharge showed higher than normal levels of thermotolerant (faecal) coliform.

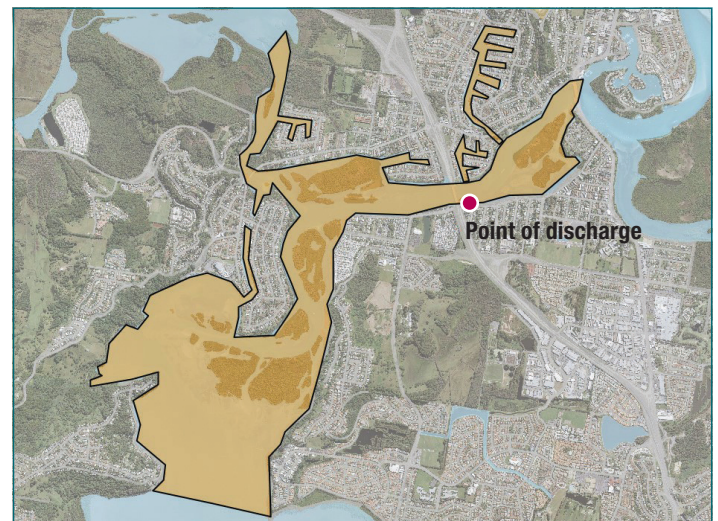

"This is a rare event and we are taking steps to manage the situation at the treatment plant and bring it back to normal operation," Director Engineering David Oxenham said.

"As a precaution, we ask that residents don't swim, canoe, water ski, jet ski or fish in parts of Terranora Broadwater and Cobaki Broadwater and Terranora Creek down to Boyds Bay Bridge – including adjoining canals – until further notice."

ON EXHIBITION

Draft Policy – Developer Contributions and Developer Charges for Community Organisations

Community organisations play an important role in the Tweed and Council is updating its policy to further reduce the burden of capital costs for community organisations developing facilities on Council-owned land. The Developer Contributions and Developer Charges for Community Organisations Policy will provide payment options for eligible organisations, instead of paying contributions and charges up front.

Council's meeting on 26 November 2017 resolved to put the draft policy on public exhibition and community submissions are invited until 11 January 2018.

The Policy defines criteria for Council to offer alternatives for payment of Section 94 Contributions and Section 64 Developer Charges on Development Approvals granted to smaller community organisations.

The draft Policy can be viewed at online at www.tweed.nsw.gov.au/OnExhibition. Printed copies are available at the Murwillumbah and Tweed Heads libraries.

Submissions should be made in writing to: General Manager, Tweed Shire Council, PO Box 816, Murwillumbah NSW 2484 or by email to tsc@tweed.nsw.gov.au before 11 January 2018.

Further information about the draft policy is available by contacting Business Planning and Strategy Coordinator Chantelle Howse on (02) 6670 2262 or by emailing chowse@tweed.nsw.gov.au
